We are delighted that so many women in the study complete the postal questionnaires. This has allowed us to publish widely on health topics of importance to women at midlife, including lifetime influences on timing of perimenopause and menopause, common symptoms and health care, breast cancer, and body dissatisfaction. Recent work is summarised on the birthday card and in our list of new publications. We are now incorporating this information on the menopause into our studies of earlier biological risk and lifetime social circumstances in relation to cardiovascular and musculoskeletal health and other measures of function.
